New Farm Bath Unit Comes All 'Packaged'

Setup May Be Attached To Existing Dwelling

An Indiana manufacturing firm has announced the introduction of a novel, factory-built bathroom to be known as Ad-a-Bath. Representing an entirely new approach to home modernization, the bath is constructed in one complete "package" for attachment to existing dwellings.

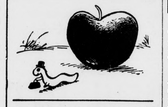
Built as a self-contained unit, the bath utilizes conventional materials and equipments, and includes all necessary fixtures and fittings for immediate installation and immediate use. It is shipped fully equipped for addition to a farm, lake cottage or suburban home. Since it is added to the exterior, there is no sacrifice of space or change of interior arrangement of the house to which it is attached.

The setup is complete in every respect with tub, lavatory stool and faucets, electric heater and built-in medicine and linen cabinets. It is of frame construction with plywood interior. Walls and floors are heavily insulated and the floor is linoleum covered.

The interior, according to the manufacturer, has been designed for maximum comfort, utility and attractiveness. Such items as towel bar, soap dish, tub grab bar, tooth brush and tumbler holder are included.

Since the unit qualifies for FHA financing, a home owner is required only to make a 10 per cent down payment, paying the balance in convenient month ly installments through his local bank.

Fewer Wormy Apples



Faithful adherents of the "apple a day" maxim, if they can think back to wear experience, will realize nowdays they are not nearly so likely as they used to be to find a worm, or half a worm, in their apple. Also, says the U. S. department of agriculture, the "spray residue" problem is not nearly so troublesome as it was.

The apple worm—or coddling moth—problem appears to be on its way out as a major concern in apple growing. DDT has proved an effective spray. In fact, in some isolated orchards that do not draw moths from unsprayed or poorly sprayed trees nearby, a good early spray program with DDT may so reduce coddling moths that there is no need to spray against a second brood.

But DDT has not proved a full solution to the apple insect problems. It does not make a clean sweep of all the pests. Thus DDT sprays permit a buildup of some pests that it does not control—the apple mites, for instance. The problem shifts, but a problem remains. The mites do not cause wormy apples, but the apples are smaller and of a poorer color.

However, the new insecticide parathion is making an impressive showing against nearly all the apple pests. Federal entomologists say that it can not yet be recommended for general use, that more control is needed.

Livestock Sanitation Gets Credit for Avian TB Curb

Professor F. E. Mussehl of the University of Nebraska poultry husbandry department credits the work of the U. S. livestock sanitation association with doing much to reduce losses from avian tuberculosis.

The livestock sanitation group comes into the picture, he explains, because avian tuberculosis was quite often found responsible for condemnation of hogs.

Wire Recorder Check

When a pure-bred white leghorn climbs into a nest on the Hoorf and Nelson breeding farm at Kirkland, Wash., it is, in its own way, making poultry history.

Unknown to the approximately 10,000 fowls on the farm, the most modern wire recorders candidly keep track of their every deed. As far as the four partners in the business know, it is the first time so many chickens have become subjects of a wire recorder.

Use of the recorder has resulted in huge savings of time and money, and records have never been so accurate, according to Art Heisdorf, who with his wife, Mary, and the Nelson brothers, Bert and Clifford, operate the farm.

Bert Nelson, partner in Kirkland, Washington's famous Heisdorf and Nelson chicken breeding farm, reads the number on the leg band on a chicken and speaks it into the microphone of a wire recorder.

It was Art's brainchild to use the recorder in "running traps"—checking up on the hens to find out which ones are laying and which ones are "lying."

It's done this way: Four days a week the trap is set. When the hen crawls in a nest a trap door closes behind her. She can't get out until one of the partners lets her out. Each hen then is given a number which is on a metal tab placed around her leg. When anyone "runs the traps," he wears a small microphone, presses the small mike button and states the number of the bird's tag, and then gives the number of eggs laid and any other pertinent information about the bird.

Frenchman, Officially Dead, Finds He Has no Home Left

PARIS.—Dead men have no homes, as Roger Demont, 35, discovered when he opened the door of his home in Saint-Placard, southern France.

There was his wife, Juliette, whom he had not seen for seven years. She stared at him, shocked. "Oh, it's you, is it?" "Yes, I'm here," he replied. But Juliette shook her head. "You are dead — there is no place for you here; you cannot come back." Roger kissed his little daughter, now 8, and sadly went away.

A French soldier taken prisoner in wartime, Demont escaped, came home, committed a theft, spent six months in jail, was forced to go to Germany to work, ended up in Russia, and was not heard from after July, 1944. He was declared legally dead. Recently, his wife became engaged to another man.

Man Who Regained Sight Says It's Like New Life

NEW YORK—A 40-year-old man who regained his sight after two years says "it was like being born again."

Carl Klein, a naturalist, blind for two years, awoke one morning with "a terrific headache."

"I saw dots flashing before my eyes," he told newsmen. "The dots merged into circles and, as the circles broke, vision came back to my eyes.

"I was afraid and did not know what to expect. I realized I saw light and I went to the window and gradually street lights took shape."

He had been a student at the Brooklyn Industrial School for the Blind for about two months. A school official said a blood clot affecting an optic nerve might have caused the blindness. He said Klein had recovered about one-half normal vision.

Klein's first wish was "to go to a park and be able to look at trees, birds and nature."
